Experience

As an Associate of the MSI staff, Mr. Pongonis is committed to design hinged on the development of honest and timeless space at all sizes and scales. His practice is based upon the principle that meaningful and contemporary infrastructure systems of organized urban spaces, connected pedestrian ways, and substantial green corridors all prove crucial to the creation of a successful, human scaled urban pattern.

An array of important projects express his beliefs and commitment to the design of a contextual human environment. His ongoing work includes project types ranging from master planning and mixed-use development planning, open space and park design, to academic and campus design.

In his final year of study at The Ohio State University, Jeff participated in a four-month study in the South American country of Argentina. The study began in the cultural capital of the country, Buenos Aires, and concluded in the academic hub of the country, Cordoba. During those four-months, his studies focused on the social, cultural, and historical significance of urban spaces and plazas.

In addition to his professional career at MSI, Jeff has assisted in the School of Landscape Architecture at The Ohio State University as an adjunct professor in the Junior Design Studio.
