

Bio

Roxyanne Cartier Burrus, Administrator of the Neighborhood Services Division, City of Columbus, in Columbus, Ohio, manages more than 100 employees in her current position. She is currently in charge of the City's code enforcement and supportive programs and manages the following community and neighborhood-focused programs; Neighborhood Pride, Neighborhood Pride Centers, Community Liaison Program, Agency Services and the city's Historic Preservation Office. Burrus has gained significant experience with neighborhoods having worked in neighborhood planning, housing and community development for more than 22 years. She holds a Bachelors Degree in Sociology from the University of California, Los Angeles, and a Masters Degree in City and Regional Planning from The Ohio State University.