Kayla Merchant is a local community organizer and long time South Side resident. Having spent seven years in Schumacher Place and part of that time spent as the secretary and then president of the civic association's executive board, Kayla has purchased a home in Southern Orchards and is looking forward to continuing to foster meaningful social and economic change on the South Side.

Kayla has worked in compliance for seven years and currently manages the compliance program for North and South America for DHL Supply Chain, and is also a freelance writer and editor in her spare time. Originally from the Osage Nation reservation in Skiatook, Oklahoma, Kayla is passionate about blue collar families and working to make not only Southern Orchards but also the South Side as a whole more equitable for all residents by ensuring residents have a point of contact for connecting residents to resources within city offices as well as City Hall.
