Experience

As an Associate and Project Manager of the MSI staff, Mr. Pongonis is committed to design that hinges on the development of timeless space at all sizes and scales. His practice is based upon the principle that quality infrastructure systems of urban and open space are crucial to the creation of sustainable and successful development. From master planning, urban design, and mixed-use development planning to recreational and urban parks; his portfolio contains an array of important projects that express his beliefs. Mr. Pongonis' role at MSI includes master planning, conceptual design, theming, design development and construction documentation.

As a part of his professional career at MSI, Jeff is in his third year of teaching in the School of Landscape Architecture at The Ohio State University as an adjunct professor in the Junior Design Studio.

In his final year of study at The Ohio State University, Jeff participated in a four-month study in the South American country of Argentina. The study began in the cultural capital of the country, Buenos Aires, and concluded in the academic hub of the country, Cordoba. During those four-months, his studies focused on the social, cultural, and historical significance of urban spaces and plazas.
