

Jason Sudy has 15 years of professional urban planning experience with both public and private sector clients. He has a demonstrated track record of client satisfaction, delivering above-expectations on project contracts, and a thorough understanding of the professional planning practice.

Jason has extensive experience in:

- Neighborhood planning
- Urban district planning
- Development plan review
- Public process engagement
- Citizen involvement
- Urban analysis and applied research
- Comprehensive planning
- Form-based codes and design guidelines
- Civic policy strategy
- Board and commission training
- Site development strategy

Jason has a passion for cities and founded Side Street Planning to help make our cities something greater. Ignoring ineffectual approaches in favor of innovative ways to make real improvements happen, Jason will use any of the new tools at his disposal, while not being afraid to re-purpose proven classic ideas in order for you to succeed.

Leading the Side Street Planning team, Jason will engage you in his passion for the city and work together, with you, to create change. Respectful of your vision for the future of your community, he will identify the path you need to get there.
