

Susan E. Ashbrook
Deputy Chief Counsel
Attorney General Richard Cordray

Ms. Ashbrook is a Deputy Chief Counsel for Attorney General Richard Cordray. In this position she assists with directing legal strategies for sections in the office, including the Environmental Enforcement Section and the Crime Victims Assistance and Prevention Section. She is also heading up the Attorney General's Special Litigation Group. Prior to joining General Cordray's team, Ms. Ashbrook was the Environmental Steward for the City of Columbus. Mayor Michael Coleman appointed her to this position in December 2006. As the environmental steward, she was charged with leading the Mayor's Get Green Columbus campaign. Prior to joining Mayor Coleman's team, Ashbrook was an assistant city attorney for six years. During her time with the City, Ashbrook assisted in negotiating and implementing two consent decrees with the Ohio EPA and the resulting 40-year, $2.5 billion Wet Weather Management program. Ashbrook also assisted the city in its efforts to protect the Big Darby watershed by working on the City's 201 plan, the Big Darby Moratorium, the Hellbranch Overlay, and most recently, the Big Darby Accord. Ashbrook served for 13 years as assistant attorney general, primarily representing Ohio EPA. She received her J.D. from The Ohio State University College of Law and her B.A. from Oberlin College.
