Sharon is a native Central Ohioan, growing up on the east side of Columbus and graduating from Gahanna Lincoln High School. She attended Bethany College, Bethany, WV, where she majored in Communications, before transferring to The Ohio State University where she received her B.A degree in Journalism (News Editorial sequence) with a concentration in Political Science. She spent several years during college and after graduation as a newspaper reporter for daily newspapers in Springfield, Ohio; Martinsburg, WV; and Williamson, WV, in addition to freelancing for the Associated Press, Charleston, WV, Bureau. In addition, she was a reporter for ThisWeek Newspapers before moving into corporate communications. In more recent years, Sharon worked at Meadow Park Church in Columbus, designing the church bulletin, website content, flyers and other communication pieces. In 2015, she started volunteering with the Myasthenia Gravis Foundation of America for the MGFA's local public awareness campaigns.
