About 1 of every 6 Ohio children ages 10 to 17 is obese, according to a 2019 report from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. That compares with about 1 in 7 children nationwide. The condition can increase a child's risk of type 2 diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure, asthma and certain cancers. The obesity rate for Ohio preteens and teenagers is 17.1%, representing about 195,400 youth. That's the 10th highest rate in the nation. There is clear and consistent evidence that reducing consumption of sugar-sweetened beverages (SSB) would improve kids' health. SSB consumption is closely tied to an increased risk for obesity, dental caries, and potentially developing insulin resistance among children. Many cities and states have enacted legislation to create default beverage policies that would limit the drink options offered in kids' meals at restaurants. This ordinance requires restaurants in Columbus to make healthy drinks -- water, low-fat milk and 100% fruit juice -- the default options offered with kids' meals.

Fiscal Impact: No funding is required for this legislation.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF COLUMBUS:

The Health Commissioner or a designee is authorized to charge and collect the civil penalties under this section.
