~~WHEREAS, the concept of the International Day of the Girl first began as a part of the World Conference on Women in Beijing, China which was held in 1995—this conference was the catalyst of change as it allowed countries to unanimously adopt the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action which at the time was the most progressive blueprint for advancing the rights of women and girls in the world as it specifically called out the rights of girls; and~~

~~WHEREAS, The United Nations General Assembly adopted Resolution 66/170 on December 19, 2011 declaring October 11th as the International Day of the Girl recognizing the rights of girls and the unique challenges facing girls around the world—the International Day of the Girl focuses attention on the need to address the challenges girls face by promoting the empowerment of girls and the fulfillment of their human rights—Adolescent girls have the right to a safe, educated, and healthy life, not only during these critical formative years, but also as they mature into women—it is believed that with effective support during the adolescent years, girls have the potential to change the world—both as the empowered girls of today and as tomorrow’s workers, mothers, entrepreneurs, mentors, household heads, and political leaders—this investment in realizing the power of adolescent girls upholds their rights and promises a more equitable and prosperous future, one in which half of humanity is an equal partner to solving the problems of climate change, political conflict, economic growth, disease prevention, and global sustainability; and~~

WHEREAS, the theme for the 2021 International Day of the Girl is “Digital generation. Our generation;” Helping girls know their digital realities and the solutions they need to pave paths to freedom of expression, joy and boundless potential –let’s commit to widening these pathways so that this generation of girls can become a generation of technologists; and

WHEREAS, the Generation Equality Forum launched a five-year commitment in 2021, advocating bolder solutions to gender inequality – the 2 year COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the digital platforms for learning, earning and connecting – some 2.2 billion people below the age of 25 still do not have internet access at home; girls are more likely to be cut off; the gender gap for global internet users has grown from 11 % in 2013 to 17 % in 2019, in developing countries, this number is around 43 % – the gender digital divide is about more than connectivity – girls are also less likely than boys to use and own devices and less likely to gain access to tech-related skills and jobs – we must address inequity and exclusion – which spans geographies and generations – ushering in a digital revolution for all, and with all; and

WHEREAS, The 2030 United Nations Agenda for Sustainable Development, adopted by world leaders in 2015, adopted 17 Sustainable Development Goals – embodying a sustainable roadmap for progress, aspiring to leave no one behind and achieving gender equality and empowerment for women, which is integral to justice, inclusion, and sustainability – these goals aspire to create a shared healthy environment for future generations of girls; and

WHEREAS, Girls continue to break through boundaries and barriers posed by stereotypes and exclusion, including barriers directed at children with disabilities and girls from marginalized communities – this proves that girls can become entrepreneurs, innovators, and initiators of global movements, moreover they can create a world that is relevant for them as well as future generations of girls, now therefore;
